

The National Agricultural Law Center

The nation's leading source for agricultural and food law research & information

NationalAgLawCenter.org | nataglaw@uark.edu

State Meat Inspection Laws: Hawaii

The state of Hawaii does not have a state inspection program. As a result, all inspected facilities within the state are governed by USDA/FSIS regulations and guidance as to the facility and practice requirements.

However, Hawaii does still have relevant statutory language regarding slaughter. That language is located at:

Haw. Rev. Stat. Div. 1, Tit. 11, Ch. 159

This material is based upon work supported by the National Agricultural Library, Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture